Everything's all good? Wrong. Barely paying attention to her surroundings and the mayhem going on around her she has no time to slow down and evaluate her new fast life. She's young, spontaneous, and eager. The secrets behind her families true identity wasn't a part of the plan and neither was her falling in love with a known drug dealer and even giving up her virginity to her new found thug whom she meets one night after she's forced to save her own life. Karma definitely didn't plan this new twist. When her innocent world is turned upside down in which she'd known it to be and turns into a new life of blood, murder, and mayhem Karma is forced to try to find herself again and escape the Sunshine State of the dirty south. Karma attempts to flee for her life and leave everything behind once realizing that everything that glitters isn't gold. Once she realizes she's in too deep and can't run from this dangerous game of cat and mouse she realizes that her innocence is gone forever and is willing to do anything to stick by her family even if it means joining the blood bath in the making.
